

The values of irrational linear forms at prime arguments

Scott Parsell (parsell@alum.mit.edu)

The Pennsylvania State University

Department of Mathematics

McAllister Building

University Park, PA 16802

USA

Abstract. We discuss a recent refinement of the Hardy-Littlewood method that allows one to obtain an asymptotic lower bound for the number of solutions of a linear diophantine inequality in three prime variables. Using the same ideas, one can show that the values of a binary linear form at prime arguments closely approximate almost all real numbers lying in a suitably discrete set.

